

H A R

- For inequality; but let your reason serve
To make the truth appear. Shaksp. Meas. for Measure.
Macbeth, beware Macduff!
- Beware the thane of Fife: dismiss me: enough.
—Whate'er thou art, for thy good caution, thanks:
Thou'lt harp'd my fear aright. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
He seems
- Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am,
Not what he knew I was. Shaksp. Ant. and Cleopatra.
- HARPER. n. f. [from harp.] A player on the harp.
Never will I trust to speeches penn'd,
Nor to the motion of a schoolboy's tongue;
Nor woo in rhyme, like a blind harper's song. Shakespeare.
I'm the god of the harp; stop, my fairest!—in vain;
Nor the harp, nor the harper, could fetch her again. Tickell.
- HARPING iron. n. f. [from harpage, Latin.] A bearded dart with a line fastened to the handle, with which whales are struck and caught.
The boat which on the first assault did go,
Struck with a harping iron the younger foe;
Who, when he felt his side so rudely gor'd,
Loud as the sea that nourish'd him he roar'd. Waller.
- HARPONE'ER. n. f. [harponeur, French, from harpoon.] He that throws the harpoon in whalefishing.
- HARPOON. n. f. [harpon, French.] A harping iron.
- HARPSICORD. n. f. A musical instrument.
- HARPY. n. f. [harpia, Latin; harpie, harpys, French.]
The harpies were a kind of birds which had the faces of women, and foul long claws, very filthy creatures; which, when the table was furnished for Phineus, came flying in, and devouring or carrying away the greater part of the victuals, did so defile the rest that they could not be endured. Raleigh.
That an harpy is not a centaur is by this way as much a truth, as that a square is not a circle. Locke.
2. A ravenous wretch.
I will do you any ambassage to the pigmies, rather than hold three words conference with this harpy. Shakespeare.
- HARQUEBUSS. n. f. [See ARQUEBUSE.] A handgun.
- HARQUEBUSSIER. n. f. [from harquebus.] One armed with a harquebus.
About thirty paces off were placed twenty thousand nimble harquebusiers, ranged in length, and but five in a rank. Kneller.
- HARRIDAN. n. f. [corrupted from haridelle, a worn-out worthless horse.] A decayed trumpet.
She just endur'd the Winter she began,
And in four months a batter'd harridan;
Now nothing's left, but wither'd, pale, and shrunk,
Now nothing's left, but wither'd, pale, and shrunk. Swift.
- HARROW. n. f. [harroue, French; harcke, German, a rake.]
A frame of timbers crossing each other, and set with teeth, drawn over fowed ground to break the clods and throw the earth over the seed.
The land with daily care
Is exercis'd, and with an iron war
Of rakes and harrows. Dryden's Georgick.
Two small harrows, that clap on each side of the ridge, harrow it right up and down. Mortimer's Husbandry.
- TO HARROW. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To break with the harrow.
Friend, harrow in time, by some manner of means.
Not only thy peason, but also thy beans. Tuff. Husbandry.
Can't thou bind the unicorn with his band in the furrow?
or will he harrow the valleys after thee? Job xxxix. 10.
Let the Volcians Plow Rome, and harrow Italy, I'll never
Be such a gossling to obey instinct. Shaksp. Coriolanus.
2. To tear up; to rip up.
I could a tale unfold, whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young blood,
Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres. Sh.
Imagine you behold me bound and scour'd,
My aged muscles harrow'd up with whips;
Or hear me groaning on this rending rack. Rowe.
3. To pillage; to strip; to lay waste. See HARRY, which in Scottish is the same thing.
As the king did excel in good commonwealth laws, so he had in secret a design to make use of them, as well for collecting of treasure as for correcting of manners; and so meaning thereby to harrow his people, did accumulate them the rather. Bacon's Henry VII.
4. To invade; to harass with incursions. [From pergian, Saxon.]
And he that harrow'd hell with heavy stowre,
The faulty souls from thence brought to his heavenly bowre. Fairy Queen, b. i. cant. 10.
Most glorious Lord of life, that on this day
Didst make thy triumph over death and sin;
And having harrow'd hell, didst bring away
Captivity thence captive, us to win. Spenser's Sonnets.
5. To disturb; to put into commotion. [This should rather be written harry, harer, French.]
Most like: it harrows me with fear and wonder. Shakespeare.

H A R

- Amaz'd I stood, harrow'd with grief and care. Milton.
Harrow now out and weal away, he cried;
What dismal day hath sent this curled light,
To see my lord so deadly damnify'd? Fairy Queen, b. ii.
- HA'RRON. interj. An exclamation of sudden distress. Now out of use.
- HA'RRONER. n. f. [from harrow.]
1. He who harrows.
2. A kind of hawk. Ainsworth.
- TO HAR'RY. v. a. [harer, French.]
1. To tease; to hare; to ruffle.
Thou must not take my former sharpness ill.
—I repent me much.
That I to harry'd him. Shaksp. Ant. and Cleopatra.
2. In Scotland it signifies to rob, plunder, or oppress: as, one harried a neef; that is, he took the young away: as also, he harried me out of houys and home; that is, he robbed me of my goods, and turned me out of doors. See TO HARROW.
- HARSH. adj. [heruifche, German, Skinner.]
1. Austere; roughly loud.
Our nature here is not unlike our wine;
Some sorts, when old, continue brisk and fine:
So age's gravity may seem severe,
But nothing harsh or bitter ought t' appear. Denham.
Sweet, bitter, four, harsh and salt, are all the epithets we have to denominate that numberless variety of relishes. Locke.
The same defect of heat which gives a fierceness to our natures, may contribute to that roughness of our language, which bears some analogy to the harsh fruit of colder countries. Swift to the Lord High Treasurer.
2. Rough to the ear.
A name unmusical to Volscian ears,
And harsh in sound to thine. Shaksp. Coriolanus.
Age might, what nature never gives the young,
Have taught the smoothness of thy native tongue;
But fate needs not that, and wit will shine
Through the harsh cadence of a rugged line. Dryden.
The unnecessary consonants made their spelling tedious, and their pronunciation harsh. Dryden.
Thy lord commands thee now
With a harsh voice, and supercilious brow,
To serve duties. Dryden's Pers. Sat. 5.
3. Crabbed; morose; peevish.
He was a wife man and an eloquent; but in his nature harsh and haughty. Bacon's Henry VII.
Bear patiently the harsh words of thy enemies, as knowing that the anger of an enemy admonishes us of our duty. Taylor.
No harsh reflection let remembrance raise;
Forbear to mention what thou can't not praise. Prior.
A certain quickness of apprehension inclined him to kindle into the first motions of anger; but, for a long time before he died, no one heard an intemperate or harsh word proceed from him. Atterbury's Sermons.
4. Rugged to the touch.
Black feels as if you were feeling needles points, or some harsh sand; and red feels very smooth. Boyle on Colours.
5. Unpleasing; rigorous.
With eloquence innate his tongue was arm'd;
Though harsh the precept, yet the preacher charm'd. Dryd.
- HARSHLY. adj. [from harsh.]
1. Sourly; austere to the palate, as unripe fruit.
2. With violence; in opposition to gentleness, unless in the following passage it rather signifies unripe.
Till, like ripe fruit, thou drop
Into thy mother's lap; or be with ease
Gather'd, not harshly pluck'd. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. xii.
3. Severely; morosely; crabbedly.
I would rather he was a man of a rough temper, that would treat me harshly, than of an effeminate nature. Addison.
4. Ruggedly to the ear.
My wife is in a wayward mood to-day:
I tell you, 'twould found harshly in her ears. Shakespeare.
Get from him why he puts on this confusion,
Grating to harshly all his days of quiet
With turbulent and dang'rous lunacy. Shaksp. Hamlet.
A hollow groan, a murr'ring wind arose;
The rings of iron that on the doors were hung,
Sent out a jarring found, and harshly rung. Dryd. Fables.
- HARSHNESS. n. f. [from harsh.]
1. Sourness; austere taste.
Take an apple and roll it upon a table hard: the rolling doth soften and sweeten the fruit, which is nothing but the smooth distribution of the spirits into the parts; for the unequal distribution of the spirits maketh the harshness. Bacon.
2. Roughness to the ear.
Neither can the natural harshness of the French, or the perpetual ill accent, be ever refined into perfect harmony like the Italian. Dryden.
Cannot I admire the height of Milton's invention, and the strength of his expression, without defending his antiquated words, and the perpetual harshness of their sound? Tis

H A R

- 'Tis not enough no harshness gives offence;
The found must seem an echo to the sense. Pope.
3. Ruggedness to the touch.
Harshness and ruggedness of bodies is unpleasant to the touch. Bacon's Natural History.
4. Crabbedness; moroseness; peevishness.
No, Regan, you shall never have my curse:
Thy tender-hefted nature shall not give Thee o'er to harshness: her eyes are fierce, but thine
Do comfort and not burn. Shaksp. King Lear.
- HART. n. f. [Saxon, Saxon.] A he-deer of the large kind;
the male of the roe.
That infant was I turn'd into a hart,
And my desires, like fell and cruel hounds,
E'er since pursue me. Shaksp. Twelfth Night.
The deer
And fearful harts do wander every where Amidst the dogs. Mary's Virgil's Georg.
- HARTSHORN. n. f.
Harshorn is a drug that comes into use as many ways, and under as many forms, as any one in the whole matéria medica.
What is used here are the whole horns of the common male deer, which fall off every year. This species is the fallow deer; but some tell us, that the medicinal hartshorn should be that of the true hart or stag, called the red deer. The salt of hartshorn is a great sudorific, and the spirit has all the virtues of volatile alkalies: it is used to bring people out of faintings by its pungency, holding it under the nose, and pouring down some drops of it in water. Hill's Mat. Med.
Rameole concretions of the volatile salts are observable upon the glass of the receiver, whilst the spirits of vipers and hartshorn are drawn. Woodward on Fossils.
- HARTSHORN. n. f. An herb. Ainsworth.
- HART-ROYAL. n. f. A plant. A species of buckthorn plantain.
- HARTSTONGUE. n. f. [lingua cervina, Latin.] A plant.
It commonly grows out from the joints of old walls and buildings, where they are moist and shady. There are very few of them in Europe. Miller.
Hartstongue is propagated by parting the roots, and also by seed. Mortimer's Husbandry.
- HARTWORT. n. f. [Stardium, Latin.] It is an umbelliferous plant, with a rose-shaped flower, consisting of five unequal heart-fashioned petals, which are placed circularly and rest on the empalement, which afterwards becomes an almost round fruit, composed of two flat seeds, which easily cast off their covering with a raised border, which are commonly indented.
It is an annual plant, and perishes soon after it has perfected its seed. It is found wild in several parts of England. Miller.
- HARVEST. n. f. [hæpæst, Saxon.]
1. The season of reaping and gathering the corn.
As it ebbs, the seedman
Upon the lime and ooze scatters his grain,
And shortly comes to harvest. Shaksp. Ant. and Cleopatra.
With harvest work he is worse than he was in the Spring. L'Estrange.
2. The corn ripened, gathered and inned.
From Ireland come I with my strength,
And reap the harvest which that rascal sow'd. Shak. H. VI.
When the father is too fondly kind,
Such seed he sows, such harvest shall he find. Dryden.
3. The product of labour.
Let these small cots and hills suffice:
Let us the harvest of our labour eat;
'Tis labour makes the coarsest diet sweet. Dryden's Juven.
1. The song which the reapers sing at the feast made for having inned the harvest.
Your hay it is mow'd, and your corn is reap'd;
Your barns will be full, and your hovels heap'd;
Come, my boys, come,
Come, my boys, come,
And merrily roar out harvest-home. Dryden's K. Arthur.
2. The time of gathering harvest.
At harvest-home, and on the shearing-day,
When he should thanks to Pan and Pales pay,
And better Ceres, trembling to approach
The little barrel. Dryden's Pers. Sat. 4.
3. The opportunity of gathering treasure.
His wife seems to be well favoured: I will use it as the key of the cuckoo's rogue's coffee; and there's my harvest-home.
Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.
- HARVEST-LORD. n. f. The head reaper at the harvest.
Grant harvest-lord more by a penny or two,
To call on his fellows the better to do. Tuff. Husbandry.
- HARVESTER. n. f. [from harvest.] One who works at the harvest.
- HARVESTMAN. n. f. [harvest and man.] A labourer in harvest.
Like to a harvestman, that's talk'd to mow
Or all, or lose his hire. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.

H A S

- TO HASH. v. n. [hacher, French.] To mince; to chop into small pieces, and mingle.
He rais'd his arm
Above his head, and rain'd a storm
Of blows so terrible and thick, Hudibras, p. i.
As if he meant to hash her quick.
What have they to complain of but too great variety, tho' some of the dishes be not served in the exactest order, and politeness; but hashed up in haste. Garth.
- HASK. n. f. This seems to signify a cave or habitation made of rushes or flags.
Phœbus, weary of his yearly task,
Establish'd hath his steeds in lowly lay,
And taken up his inn in fishes' hask. Spenser's Pastoral.
- HA'SLET. n. f. [hastla, Icelandic, a bundle; hastler, hast, HA'SLET. } terau, hastler, French.] The heart, liver, and lights of a hog, with the windpipe and part of the throat to it.
Phœbus, weary of his yearly task,
Establish'd hath his steeds in lowly lay,
And taken up his inn in fishes' hask. Spenser's Pastoral.
- HASP. n. f. [hæp, Saxon, whence in some provinces it is yet called hæp.] A clasp folded over a staple, and fastened on with a padlock.
Have doors to open and shut at pleasure, with hasps to them. Mortimer's Husbandry.
- TO HASP. v. n. [from the noun.] To shut with a hasp.
- HA'SSOCK. n. f. [hassack, German. Skinner.]
1. A thick mat on which men kneel at church.
He found his parishioners very irregular; and in order to make them kneel, and join in the responses, he gave every one of them a hassock and common prayer book. Addison.
2. In Scotland it is applied to any thing made of rushes or privet, on which a person may sit: it is therefore probable that hassock and hask are the same.
- HAST. The second person singular of have.
- HASTE. n. f. [haste, French; haste, Dutch.]
1. Hurry; speed; nimbleness; precipitation.
Spare him, death!
Let not pity with her tears
Keep such distance from thine ears:
But O, thou wilt not, canst not spare!
Haste hath never time to hear. Craikaw.
Our liars reform'd, and not compos'd in haste,
Polish'd like marble, would like marble last;
But as the present, so the last age writ;
In both we find like negligence and wit. Waller.
In as much haste as I am, I cannot forbear giving an example. Dryden's Dufresnoy.
- The wretched father, running to their aid
With pious haste, but vain, they next invade. Dryden.
2. Passion; vehemence.
I laid in my haste, all men are liars. Pf. cxvi. 11.
- TO HASTE. v. n. [haster, French; hastien, Dutch.]
TO HASTEN. v. n. [haster, French; hastien, Dutch.]
1. To make haste; to be in a hurry; to be busy; to be speedy.
I have not hastened from being a pastor to follow thee. Jer.
2. To move with swiftness.
'Tis Cinna, I do know him by his gait;
He is a friend. Cinna, where haste you so? Shakespeare.
They were troubled and hasted away. Pf. xlviii. 5.
All those things are pass'd away like a shadow, and as a post that hasted by. Wisd. v. 9.
Hasting to pay his tribute to the sea,
Like mortal life to meet eternity. Denham.
These rites perform'd, the prince, without delay,
Hastes to the nether world, his destin'd way. Dryden's Æn.
To distant Sparta, and the spacious waste
Of sandy Pyle, the royal youth shall haste. Pope's Odyssey.
Soon as the sun awakes the sprightly court,
Leave their repose, and hasten to the sport. Prior.
- TO HASTE. v. a. To push forward; to urge on; to pre-
TO HASTEN. } cipitate; to drive to a swifter pace.
Let it be so hasted, that supper be ready at the farthest by five of the clock. Shaksp. Merry Wives of Windsor.
All hopes of succour from your arms is past;
To save us now, you must our ruin haste. Dryden.
Each sees his lamp with diff'rent lustre crown'd;
Each knows his course with diff'rent periods bound;
And in his passage through the liquid space,
Nor hastens, nor retards his neighbour's race. Prior.
- HA'STENER. n. f. [from hasten.] One that hastens or hurries.
- HA'STILY. adj. [from hasty.]
1. In a hurry; speedily; nimbly; quickly.
A voice, that called loud and clear,
Come hither, hither, O come hastily! Fa. Queen.
If your grace incline that we should live,
You must not, sir, too hastily forgive. Waller.
The next to danger, hot pursu'd by fate,
Half cloth'd, half naked, hastily retire. Dryden.
2. Rashly; precipitately.
Without considering consequences, we hastily engaged in a war which hath cost us sixty millions. Swift.
3. Passionately; with vehemence.
- HASTINESS. n. f. [from hasty.]
1. Haste;
